Magnetic North:

Magnetic North Martina Weinhart, 2021-05-04 This book reveals the magnificent landscape paintings of the Group of Seven and their associates and explores how they contributed to Canada's modern cultural identity. The early decades of the 20th century were marked by artistic, economic, and social transformation in Canada and around the world. Starting in Toronto, a group of young modern artists including Tom Thomson and Lawren S. Harris and Emily Carr in British Columbia desired to create a new painting vocabulary for the young nation coming into its own cultural identity. They turned away from city life and explored Canada's landscape painting sublime vistas, monumental rivers, ancient forests, around the Great Lakes, the mighty Rocky Mountains, and the Arctic tundra, determined to break away from European stylistic traditions. Together, their paintings imagined a mythical Canada, expansive and rugged, that added to their country's growing sense of national pride. Featuring paintings, sketches, photographs, film stills, and documentary material, this catalog examines the language of Canadian modernism. It also includes essays and interviews that offer contemporary indigenous perspectives on the impact of industry on nature, issues surrounding national identity, and modern Canadian landscape painting. This generously illustrated book critically reviews Canada's modernism in art history. Magnetic North David Halsey, Diana Landau, 1991

Magnetic North Margaret Andera, Lucy R. Lippard, 2004 Magnetic North: The Landscapes of Tom Uttech presents a survey of more than thirty years of Tom Uttech's art. Uttech, one of the most widely admired landscape painters in America, reestablishes the wilderness as a mystical place where the colors of nature flourish and the various forces of nature are played out. He is inspired by the northern woods and prairie of Wisconsin and his numerous camping and canoeing trips to Northern Minnesota and Quetico Provincial Park in Ontario, Canada. North Pole, South Pole Gillian Turner, 2011-01-11 This fantastic story of one of physics' great riddles takes us through centuries of scientific history. Simon Lamb, author of Devil in the Mountain, asks: Why do compass needles point north but not quite north? What guides the migration of birds, whales, and fish across the world's oceans? How is Earth able to sustain life under an onslaught of solar wind and cosmic radiation? For centuries, the world's great scientists have grappled with these questions, all rooted in the same phenomenon: Earth's magnetism. Over two thousand years after the invention of the compass, Einstein called the source of Earth's magnetic field one of the greatest unsolved mysteries of physics. Here, for the first time, is the complete history of the quest to understand the planet's attractive pull, from the ancient Greeks' fascination with lodestone to the geological discovery that the North Pole has not always been in the North, and to the astonishing modern conclusions that finally revealed the true source. Richly illustrated and skillfully told, North Pole, South Pole unfolds the human story behind the science, that of the inquisitive, persevering, and often dissenting thinkers who unlocked the secrets at our planet's core. In recent years, many very good books for interested non-scientists have been published: Richard Dawkins's Climbing Mount Improbable and The Ancestor's Tale; Stephen Jay Gould's The Lying Stones of Marrakech; and Dava Sobel's Longitude and The Planets to name some of them.

North Pole South Pole is a worthy addition to that list Turner has a great story to tell and she tells it well The Press New Zealand

The Spinning Magnet Alanna Mitchell, 2018-01-30 The mystery of Earth's invisible life supporting power Alanna Mitchell's globe trotting history of the science of electromagnetism and the Earth's magnetic field right up to the latest indications that the North and South Poles may soon reverse with apocalyptic results will soon change the way you think about our planet Award winning journalist Alanna Mitchell's science storytelling introduce intriguing characters from the thirteenth century French investigations into magnetism and the Victorian era discover that electricity and magnetism emerge from the same fundamental force to the latest research No one has ever told so eloquently how the Earth itself came to be seen as a magnet spinning in space with two poles and that those poles have dramatically reversed many time often coinciding with mass extinctions The most recent reversal was 780 000 years ago Mitchell explores indications that the Earth's magnetic force field is decaying faster than previously thought When the poles switch a process that takes many years the Earth is unprotected from solar radiation storms that would among other disturbances wipe out much and possibly all of our electromagnetic technology Navigation for all kinds of animals is disrupted without a stable magnetic North Pole But can you imagine no satellites no Internet no smartphones maybe no power grids at all Alanna Mitchell offers a beautifully crafted narrative history of surprising ideas and science illuminating invisible parts of our own planet that are constantly changing around us

Magnetic Los Angeles Greg Hise, 1997 The book has three aims First it places the history of city building in southern California in a national context Second it explains the changing form of American cities during the twentieth century using Los Angeles as a primary case study Where other accounts focus exclusively on housing and home building this book reveals a major rearrangement of urban functions and the concomitant dispersion of industry and commerce The third most ambitious intention is to uncover and interpret the imaginative structures residents and scholars have devised for understanding American cities and thereby contribute to a reframing of current debates in urban theory
