Medicine: Brain Disease and Doctors in Novels, Theater, and Film J. Bogousslavsky,S. Dieguez,2013-03-07 Classical and modern literature is full of patients with interesting neurological cognitive or psychiatric diseases often including detailed and accurate descriptions which suggests the authors were inspired by observations of real people In many cases these literary portrayals of diseases even predate their formal identification by medical science Fictional literature encompasses nearly all kinds of disorders affecting the nervous system with certain favorites such as memory loss and behavioral syndromes There are even unique observations that cannot be found in scientific and clinical literature because of the lack of appropriate studies Not only does literature offer a creative and humane look at disorders of the brain and mind but just as authors have been inspired by medicine and real disorders clinicians have also gained knowledge from literary depictions of the disorders they encounter in their daily practice This book provides an amazing and fascinating look at neurological conditions patients and doctors in literature and film in a way which is both nostalgic and novel Louis Lambert Honoré de Balzac,1892 The Dream of an Absolute Language Lynn R. universal principle yet despite a number of recent books on the subject it has been given comparatively little genuinely systematic attention by philosophers social scientists or even literary theorists In The Habit of Lying John Vignaux Smyth examines three forms of falsification lying concealment and fiction and makes a strong critique of traditional approaches to each of them and above all to the relations among them With recourse to Rene Girard Paul de Man Theodor Adorno Leo Strauss and other theoreticians not usually considered together Smyth arrives at some surprising conclusions about the connections between lying mimesis sacrifice sadomasochism and the sacred among other central subjects Arguing that the relation between lying and truth-telling has been characterized in the West by sharply sacrificial features he begins with a critique of the philosophies of lying espoused by Kant and Sissela Bok then concludes that the problem of truth and lies leads to the further problem of the relation between law and arbitrariness as well as to the relation between rationality and unanimity Constructively criticizing the work of such philosophers as Bertrand Russell Ludwig Wittgenstein Richard Rorty and Nelson Goodman Smyth shows how these problems occur comparably in fiction theory and how Paul de Man's definition of fiction as arbitrariness finds confirmation in analytic philosophy Through the novels of Defoe Stendhal and Beckett with topics ranging from Defoe's treatment of lies fiction and obscenity to Beckett's treatment of the anus and the sacred Smyth demonstrates how these texts generalize the issues of mendacity concealment and sacrificial arbitrariness in Girard's sense to almost every aspect of experience fiction theory and cultural life The final section of the book taking its cue from

Beatrice Martina Guenther, 1996-07-12 Traditionally the act of writing constitutes a challenge to the finality of death Yet writing as a subject for literary texts has its own tradition of imagery whose rhetoric is associated with loss rather than immortality The limit of death seems to force a more explicit analysis of the process of writing Writers consider the impact of their work on their readers or re-articulate the link between the written text and the subject it is meant to represent Each writer constructs a subversive text The conjunction of writing and death besides highlighting or demystifying the creative act leads in each case to a decidedly critical stance Guenther examines how Kleist's and Balzac's representations of death bring with them a critical awareness that calls attention to the historical context in which the texts are produced
