prominent architects in the South Town's residential designs are perceptibly influenced by the diverse culture of south Louisiana. His synthesis of the classic Acadian cottage, Spanish courtyards and exterior French doors with Creole influenced full length shutters achieves an original confluence of seemingly disparate yet elegantly balanced themes and forms. Other Town trademarks include pigeoniers, tree alleys, thirteen foot ceilings, heavy use of such woods as cypress and heart of pine, plantation style separate structures and brick floors with a special beeswax finish. The Louisiana Houses of A Hays Town illuminates the momentous effect Town has had on the look of Louisiana. Crafted from the perspective of two people, Vetter and Gould, who are not architects but admirers of one man's exceptional talent, this delightful book demonstrates that each Town house is a work of art that fits both person and terrain. At the door of each home, proud owners hang a bronze plaque that says it all. Rolland Golden Rolland Golden, 2014-08-08. In the early twentieth century the French Quarter had become home to a vibrant community of working artists attracted to the atmosphere, architecture and colorful individuals who populated the scene and who also became some of its first preservationists. Louisiana native Rolland Golden was one of these artists to live work and raise a family in this most storied corner of New Orleans. With 94 black and white and 54 color photographs and illustrations, his memoir of that life focuses on the period of 1955 to 1976. Golden, a painter, discusses the particular challenges of making a living from art and his story becomes a family affair involving his daughters and his beloved wife Stella. Golden's studio sat in a patio on Royal Street around the corner from Preservation Hall where old time musicians played Dixieland Jazz. Golden sketched and painted many of them in a visual style that encompassed realism and gradually developed into abstract realism. Golden recalls work that he did in historic preservation, sketching architecture for publications such as the Vieux Carre Courier and he discusses his studies with renowned regionalist painter John McCrady. The artist frankly discusses his experiences with the display, representation and sale of his work, presenting a little explored and yet crucial part of a working artist's life. The memoir concludes with Golden and his wife traveling to the premiere of his exhibition in Moscow, having been selected by a Russian envoy as the only American artist to have a one man touring exhibition in the former Soviet Union. Among the nearly 150 black and white and color illustrations are never before seen photos and sketches by the artist.
