Dignity, Degrading Treatment and Torture in Human Rights Law Elaine Webster, 2018-04-27 Although scholars have shown longstanding interest in the boundaries of interpretation of the right not to be subjected to torture and other prohibited harm the existing body of work does not sufficiently reflect the significance of the interpretive scope of degrading treatment This book argues that the degrading treatment element of the right is a crucial site of analysis in itself and for understanding the parameters of the right as a whole It addresses how methodologically the scope of meaning and application of the right not to be subjected to degrading treatment should best be identified and considers the implications thereof It systematically examines the diverse aspects of degrading treatment's scope from foundations of legal interpretation to the drivers of humiliation It draws on wide ranging literature and extensive analysis of more than 1 500 judgments of the European Court of Human Rights which has pioneered the right's interpretive growth The book aims to explore how the interpretive possibilities and limits of the right not to be subjected to degrading treatment turn upon the axes of human dignity and state responsibility and aims to show how this right's protection can be achieved as well as limited through processes of interpretation Dignity Degrading Treatment and Torture in Human Rights Law provides interpreters with analytical tools to advance the application of the right not to be subjected to torture cruel inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment in international regional and domestic human rights law It will appeal to all who have an interest in understanding the right's meaning development and potential scope of application as well as those with an interest in methodologies of human rights interpretation

Reading the Romance Janice A. Radway, 2009-11-18 Originally published in 1984 Reading the Romance challenges popular and often demeaning myths about why romantic fiction one of publishing's most lucrative categories captivates millions of women readers Among those who have disparaged romance reading are feminists literary critics and theorists of mass culture They claim that romances enforce the woman reader's dependence on men and acceptance of the repressive ideology purveyed by popular culture Radway questions such claims arguing that critical attention must shift from the text itself taken in isolation to the complex social event of reading She examines that event from the complicated business of publishing and distribution to the individual reader's engagement with the text Radway's provocative approach combines reader response criticism with anthropology and feminist psychology Asking readers themselves to explore their reading motives habits and rewards she conducted interviews in a midwestern town with forty two romance readers whom she met through Dorothy Evans a chain bookstore employee who has earned a reputation as an expert on romantic fiction Evans defends her customers choice of entertainment reading romances she tells Radway is no more harmful than watching sports on television We read books so we won't cry is the poignant explanation one woman offers for her reading habit Indeed Radway found that while the women she studied devote themselves to nurturing their families these wives and mothers receive insufficient devotion or nurturance in return In romances the women find not only escape from the demanding and often tiresome routines of their lives but also a hero who supplies the tenderness and admiring attention that they have learned not to expect The heroines admired by Radway's group defy the expected stereotypes they are strong independent and intelligent That such characters often find themselves to be victims of male aggression and almost always resign themselves to accepting conventional roles in life has less to do Radway argues with the women readers' fantasies and choices than with their need to deal with a fear of masculine dominance These romance readers resent not only the limited choices in their own lives but the patronizing attitude that men especially express toward their reading tastes In fact women read romances both to protest and to escape temporarily the narrowly defined role prescribed for them by a patriarchal culture Paradoxically the books that they read make conventional roles for women seem desirable It is this complex relationship between culture text and woman reader that Radway urges feminists to address Romance readers she argues should be encouraged to deliver their protests in the arena of actual social relations rather than to act them out in the solitude of the imagination In a new introduction Janice Radway places the book within the context of current scholarship and offers both an explanation and critique of the study's limitations

Farming in Northern Macomb County Linda Osborne Cynowa, 2021 Macomb County is located in the eastern portion of Michigan and is considered part of northern Metro Detroit Formally organized on January 15, 1818, the county was named after Alexander Macomb Jr, a Detroit-born veteran of the War of 1812 who distinguished himself in the Battle of Plattsburg From the early days of the county's founding when the government started selling parcels to settlers the land was primarily used for farming Truck farming was and continues to be greatly important to the farming communities in Macomb County as crops have long been taken down to Detroit's Eastern Market to be sold every Saturday morning Despite significant land development which started in the 1970s at the boundary line of Hall Road and steadily moved north over time Macomb County's agricultural heritage is still evident today with a large percent of landmass remaining in farms Jackpot Karla Oceanak, 2014-07-21
