I. Introduction

Fumiharu Mieno

The fourth Kashiwajima-seminar¹⁾ was held as an international symposium at the annual conference of Japan Association for Asian Studies (June 2019, Keio University) on the theme of “Southeast Asian Studies in Asia: New Perspectives on Inter-Asia Relations”. Discussions focused on recent research trends of Southeast Asian Studies in the academic community in Asia. Here we present a brief overview of these discussions with presentations by four invited guests from aboard, and two discussants from JAAS.

Southeast Asian Studies have become remarkably globalized, through a series of transformations including a significant geographic shift of major research centers from the West to Asia itself. The coverage of the studies to include within each Southeast Asian country is also expanding beyond single-country case studies to include wider regional perceptives, comparative studies, and international collaborations. Southeast Asian Studies are also an increasingly active field in a number of East Asian countries including China, Taiwan and Korea, as well as here in Japan. As result, a wider and deeper research network across Asia is emerging. These significant developments in the field reflect the remarkable improvement of research environments at many universities in Asia over recent years and a deepening interdependence in the region, and in several countries.

Current work on Southeast Asian Studies in Asia covers a diverse range of issues. Political science work tends to focus on traditional topics such as democratization or domestic political integration, while research concerns in the field of economics generally involves cross-regional and globally comparative topics such as sub-regional development. Work on Islamic Studies and Ethnic Studies of Chinese in Southeast Asia have been rapidly emerging in the humanities and social sciences. Ethnic Chinese studies can be seen to coincide with Southeast Asia’s social change toward overcoming conventional social taboos. Contemporary Southeast Asian studies in Asia are diverse; those in China seems driven by Belt and Road Initiative’s momentum, while those of Taiwan seems largely related to their concern on national security issues or reconsideration of national identification.

The purpose of the symposium was to view these diversified research trends in the academic community, and to discuss the future possibility. The remaining sections consist of extended proceedings of four invited speakers’ presentations, whose brief profiles and topics are introduced as follows.

Professor BI Shihong of Yunnan University in China is a recognized authority on Southeast Asian Studies in the country. He has served as the deputy director of Institute of the Belt and Road Initiatives in the university and is well versed in the issues of the China’s foreign policy.

The Columbia Companion to Modern East Asian Literature Joshua S. Mostow,2003-07-10 This extraordinary one volume guide to the modern literatures of China Japan and Korea is the definitive reference work on the subject in the English language With more than one hundred articles that show how a host of authors and literary movements have contributed to the general literary development of their respective countries this companion is an essential starting point for the study of East Asian literatures Comprehensive thematic essays introduce each geographical section with historical overviews and surveys of persistent themes in the literature examined including nationalism gender family relations and sexuality Following the thematic essays are the individual entries over forty for China over fifty for Japan and almost thirty for Korea featuring everything from detailed analyses of the works of Tanizaki Jun ichiro and Murakami Haruki to far ranging explorations of avant garde fiction in China and postwar novels in Korea Arrayed chronologically each entry is self contained though extensive cross referencing affords readers the opportunity to gain a more synoptic view of the work author or movement The unrivaled opportunities for comparative analysis alone make this unique companion an indispensable reference for anyone interested in the burgeoning field of Asian literature Although the literatures of China Japan and Korea are each allotted separate sections the editors constantly kept an eye open to those writers works and movements that transcend national boundaries This includes for example Chinese authors who lived and wrote in Japan Japanese authors who wrote in classical Chinese and Korean authors who write in Japanese whether under the colonial occupation or because they are resident in Japan The waves of modernization can be seen as reaching each of these countries in a staggered fashion with eddies and back flows between them then complicating the picture further This volume provides a vivid sense of this dynamic interplay

Southeast Asian Studies Cynthia Chou, Vincent Houben, 2006 What is the relevance of the area studies approach to Southeast Asia The current state and future directions of area studies of which Southeast Asian studies are a part is a central question not only to scientists working in the field but also those engaged in university politics This collection of nine articles is written by specialists from different disciplinary backgrounds and working in institutions of higher learning all around the world It provides an up to date insight into the current state of the study field its strengths and weaknesses and seeks ways to reconfigure Southeast Asian studies in order to meet the challenges of a region that is caught up in profound transformation as a consequence of both globalization and localization

Changing Governance and Public Policy in East Asia Ka Ho Mok, Ray Forrest, 2008-11-24 The search for good governance has become an increasingly important element of public policy and public management and is high on the political agenda of East Asian countries The need for robust governance structures and institutions was brought into sharp focus by the Asian Financial Crisis which adversely affected most East Asian societies Since then they have begun to look for ways to restructure their public administration and political systems in order to develop new mechanisms and structures to promote good governance This book focuses on how selected Asian states have responded to the growing impact of liberalizing and marketizing trends in public policy formulation and public management To what extent is the state guided regime in Asia still relevant to governing public policy public management What are the policy implications for a growing number of Asian states which are pursuing more pro competition policy instruments The book is a timely and important collection that offers critical analysis of the search for new governance in Asia and compares and contrasts experiences in selected Asian societies such as China Japan Hong Kong Taiwan South Korea Singapore and other parts of South East Asia Chapters are written by leading scholars in the fields of comparative development policy and governance studies from Hong Kong Macau Taiwan China Singapore Japan and the United Kingdom
