(Independent)

Picture Post represented a new kind of British journalism when it was first launched by its founder, Edward Hulton, under the brilliant editorship of Stefan Lorant and Tom Hapkinson in October 1938. Subtitled 'Hulton's National Weekly', it quickly became a national institution. Authoritative, international in perspective, objective, idealistic, witty but not trivial, it achieved the status of a unique chronicle of its time. Established authors of the calibre of Rebecca West, Cyril Connolly and Somerset Maugham contributed; but what gave Picture Post its special journalistic character was the way in which the photographs, with their distinctive new kind of captions, dominated the reporting. On its demise in June 1957, there was nothing in journalism to take its place.

It is hardly surprising that Picture Post is remembered by many people with great nostalgia. Now it is the subject of renewed interest among younger people, and back issues are much sought after. This commemorative volume is published to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Picture Post. A new selection of photographs has been made from the twenty-year span of the magazine, whose archives contain much that was not published. They are knitted together by Robert Kee's stimulating text and captions, bringing to life those vanished times.

Born in 1919, Robert Kee has a history degree from Oxford and has been writing ever since he left the RAF, in which he was a bomber pilot, in 1946. He worked for Picture Post from 1948 to 1951; he has also been a special correspondent for the Observer and The Sunday Times, and literary editor of the Spectator. He has worked with the BBC and ITV on many current affairs programmes and documentaries over many years, and is well known for the award-winning BBC series Ireland: A Television History. His books include 1939: The World We Left Behind and its sequel 1945: The World We Fought For and, most recently, Manch: The Eleventh Hour.
