Durand Frederick Church and others that caught the grandeur of the wilderness and that gave texture color and form to Irving's and Cooper's imaginings. Here are the entrepreneurs and financiers who saw the Catskills as a way to strike it rich plundering the resources that had been likened to creation: the Catskills tanneries that supplied the boots and saddles for Union troops in the Civil War and the bluestone quarries whose excavated rock became the curbs and streets of the fast growing Eastern Seaboard. Here are the Catskills brought fully to life in all of their intensity, beauty, vastness and lunacy.

In Search of the Picturesque Kenneth W. Maddox, 1983 Making Mountains David Stradling, 2009-11-23 For over two hundred years the Catskill Mountains have been repeatedly and dramatically transformed by New York City. In Making Mountains David Stradling shows the transformation of the Catskills landscape as a collaborative process, one in which local and urban hands, capital and ideas have come together to reshape the mountains and the communities therein. This collaboration has had environmental, economic and cultural consequences. Early on the Catskills were an important source of natural resources. Later when New York City needed to expand its water supply, engineers helped direct the city toward the Catskills, claiming that the mountains offered the purest and most cost effective waters. By the 1960s New York had created the great reservoir and aqueduct system in the mountains that now supplies the city with 90 percent of its water. The Catskills also served as a critical space in which the nation's ideas about nature evolved. Stradling describes the great influence writers and artists had upon urban residents, especially the painters of the Hudson River School whose ideal landscapes created expectations about how rural America should appear. By the mid 1800s urban residents had turned the Catskills into an important vacation ground and by the late 1800s the Catskills had become one of the premiere resort regions in the nation. In the mid twentieth century the older Catskill resort region was in steep decline but the Jewish Borscht Belt in the southern Catskills was thriving. The automobile revitalized mountain tourism and residence and increased the threat of suburbanization of the historic landscape. Throughout each of these significant incarnations urban and rural residents worked in a rough collaboration, though not without conflict, to reshape the mountains and American ideas about rural landscapes and nature.

The Police Journal, 1925 Bulletin New Haven Free Public Library, 1894 Possessions Judith Richardson, 2009-07-01 The cultural landscape of the Hudson River Valley is crowded with ghosts: the ghosts of Native Americans and Dutch colonists of Revolutionary War soldiers and spies of presidents, slaves, priests and laborers. Possessions asks why this region just outside New York City became the locus for so many ghostly tales and shows how these hauntings came to operate as a peculiar type of social memory whereby things lost, forgotten or marginalized returned to claim possession of imaginations and territories. Reading Washington Irving's stories along with a diverse array of narratives from local folklore and regional writings, Judith Richardson explores the causes and consequences of Hudson Valley hauntings to reveal how ghosts both evolve from specific historical contexts and are conjured to serve the present needs of those they haunt. These tales of haunting, Richardson argues, are no mere echoes of the past but function in an ongoing, contentious
