

Vietnamese Cultural Identification as Reflected in Three Writing Systems

"Letters are symbols which turn matter into spirit".

Alphonse de Lamartine

Abstract: The culture of Vietnam, one of the oldest in Southeast Asia, develops through different ages: Mesolithic Hòa Bình culture, Neolithic Bắc Sơn culture, Đông Sơn culture, Chinese culture with the revelation of Confucianism and Taoism, Hindu culture with the influence of Buddhism, Western culture with the implantation of Christianity and the welcome to occidental thought etc. In the long history of Vietnam, many writing systems are found and more or less 30 different systems have been still in use but in the scale of this article, I will focus on only three writing systems: 漢字 Hanzi, 喃字 chữ Nôm and chữ Quốc ngữ. It is interesting to study the history of written symbols (Hanzi: 文字; Vietnamese: văn tự or chữ viết) of certain Vietnamese ethnicities because these special cultural artifacts maintain obviously many cultural patrimonies of the nation, or in other words, they reflect gracefully the national cultural history.

Keywords: Acculturation, Vietnamese Cultural Identification, Three Writing Systems, 漢字 Hanzi, 喃字 chữ Nôm, Chữ Quốc ngữ

In other words, cultural identification - like culture - should be regarded as a process of creative constructions and successful integration and envisaged in terms of a better

Making Public Investment More Efficient ,2015-01-05 Public investment supports the delivery of key public services connects citizens and firms to economic opportunities and can serve as an important catalyst for economic growth After three decades of decline public investment has begun to recover as a share of GDP in emerging markets EMs and low income developing countries LIDCs but remains at historic lows in advanced economies AEs The increase in public investment in EMs and LIDCs has led to some convergence between richer and poorer countries in the quality of and access to social infrastructure e g schools and hospitals and to a lesser extent economic infrastructure e g roads and electricity However the economic and social impact of public investment critically depends on its efficiency Comparing the value of public capital input and measures of infrastructure coverage and quality output across countries reveals average inefficiencies in public investment processes of around 30 percent The economic dividends from closing this efficiency gap are substantial the most efficient public investors get twice the growth bang for their public investment buck than the least efficient
